Echoes of the Streets
H. Y. Butler, arrested on a charge of attempting to commit burglary pleaded guilty to the charge this morning in Judge Oldfield's division of the district court and was sentenced to a term of one year in the state penitentiary. The attempt at burglary was committed at a store in the 800 block on East Fourth street.

The case of Lacey vs. Compton was dismissed by Judge Clark this morning for want of prosecution.

County commissioners can only grant an assessment over school land or public land for road purposes and cannot execute a fee simple title, according to an opinion of the attorney general's office, written by R. E. Wood. The opinion is directed to the school land commission, but the case comes from Pottawatomie county, the commissioners of that county making the inquiry of the school land commission. The commissioners desired to permit the opening of a road other than on the section line. The opinion from the attorney general's office says the commissioners may grant a perpetual easement to the portion of the ground desired for road purposes, but they cannot sell it outright.

MYSTERY ABOUT WIFE OF STARR
First Wife of the Oklahoma Bandit Was Divorced From Him Some Time Ago.
LIVING WITH HIS MOTHER

The report that a divorce was granted to a wife of Henry Starr at Sapulpa Saturday has been received with some doubt here. It is considered possible that some woman by that name secured a divorce, but not from the Henry Starr, captured at Stroud following the robbing of a bank there by himself and comrades. Whether or not Henry Starr had more than one wife is questioned by some.

Judge Nance of Stillwell, Ok., called at the office of Governor Williams today and in speaking of the Starrs said that Mrs. Starr, the first wife of Henry, and who was his wife when he was taken to the Penitentiary in Colorado, is now living in Stillwell. She holds the position of stenographer in the county court there and supports her son, about 9 years old, and Henry Starr's mother, who lives with them. It had been reported that Henry Starr's mother and his wife had reached Chandler Sunday morning. Judge Nance said that so far as he knows Henry Starr's mother was in Stillwell Saturday evening and that it would have been impossible for her to make the trip from Stillwell to Stroud by Sunday morning.

The Mrs. Starr now at Stillwell secured a divorce from Starr when he was in the Colorado prison, it is understood. Previous to that time she was a school teacher and a very estimable woman. She was given the custody of the child when the father went to Colorado. She has had him since. People who say they know Starr have no knowledge that he was married after his first wife secured her divorce.

Saw Starr in Robbery.
Judge Nance says he remembers well the time Starr robbed the Ben toville, Ark. bank, a number of years ago. At that time Judge Nance was county judge of that county. He lived on the road which the robbers took in leaving town after they had looted the bank. Two small children of Judge and Mrs. Nance were playing in the road when the shooting between citizens and the robbers began and Mrs. Nance went out to get the little ones. While on the side walk one of the robbers passed by his house and when almost opposite Mrs. Nance he dropped the sack in which he had put the money—$11,000—in a pen from the bank. He stopped his horse, ran back and picked up the sack and escaped, during which time a rain of bullets was sent after him. Several years after a man visited a family living next door to the Nances. Mrs. Nance saw him and told her husband it was the same man whom she had seen pick up the sack of money.

It was Henry Starr. It is said that once having seen the man no one can mistake him a second time. His shoulders are broad, almost out of proportion to the rest of his body.

This Merchant Knows Him.
Senator Edmondson of Lincoln county also has a story about Starr that is of more recent date. That is, it was Starr who robbed the Carney State bank only a few weeks ago. Starr in his letter to Governor Williams said that he did not participate in the Carney affair. A merchant by the name of Stump went in the bank just before the robbers entered to make a deposit. He carried the money in a sack, some $70. He had just placed the sack in the window but had not received a certificate of deposit when the robbers covered the bank officials together with Stump, and took his sack of money.

Stump and the bank officials were marched down the road from town about a mile, and turned loose. While walking along the road looking into the barrel of one of the robber's guns.

Stump remarked that he thought he had been treated unfairly, that the sack of money they took from him was his own and that it did not belong to the bank. That he had not received a certificate of deposit before the robbers entered the bank.

Will Go to See Starr.
"I'll show you that my heart is right," said the man covering Stump. "You reach in that fellow's pocket and pull your sack of money out." Stump, telling the story, said that he did not know whether to do it or not, that he could not tell whether the robber was bluffing or whether he meant it. Anyhow Stump did as he was told and got his money. He was liberated a few minutes after and went back to town with his sack of money. Stump will go to Chandler and see Starr. He can tell whether or not it was Starr who robbed the Carney bank.

Saturday morning the sheriff of Lincoln county was sitting in his office looking at the picture of Henry Starr which had been sent him from the Colorado prison authorities. The Lincoln county sheriff had sent for it in connection with the Carney bank robbery. While the sheriff was studying the face of the noted outlaw the telephone rang and he was informed of the Stroud bank robbery and the capture of Starr.

KELSEYS IN A DIVORCE TRIAL
Husband Did Not Love His Wife Because She Was Too Fat, One Witness Testified on the Stand.

Jessie B. Kelsey and William E. Kelsey are parties to a divorce suit before Judge Oldfield which in some respects rivals that of Emma Hart, Claude and Eugene Hartshorne, which reached much interest a few weeks ago in the same court.

On the stand Mrs. Kelsey was questioned closely about a federal liquor license which she had in her possession. She stated that she and her husband had secured the license after a visit of the federal officials to their home. "We did it to keep out of trouble with the government," she stated.

"How long have you been bootlegging?" she was asked.

"About a year or a little more."

She stated that she lived at 704 West Third street.

She was next asked where she secured the whisky and she gave the name of the man she said had furnished her with part of it.

"How many men and women did you sell it to?" she was asked by lawyers for Mr. Kelsey.

"I don't know. Mr. Kelsey generally carried it out to the men."

The 16-year-old daughter of Mr. Kelsey and a stepdaughter of Mrs. Kelsey were called to the stand. She stated that she had heard her stepfather curse her mother on several occasions. When asked what he had done to support her, the girl stated that after the mother and stepfather separated Mr. Kelsey had purchased her a $2 pair of shoes to get Mrs. Kelsey to return and live with him.

Margaret Carroll testified that she had lived with Mrs. Kelsey for four years or more and that on one occasion Mr. Kelsey came into the room in which she was working and that after ordering her to dance he had drawn a six shooter and had begun shooting into the floor.

"I would have danced, too, but I was frightened and could not move," the girl testified.

Another witness testified that on one occasion Mr. Kelsey came home and when Mrs. Kelsey threatened to telephone for the police he cut the wires of the telephone. He then threatened to cut her, so the witness testified.

Edith Curtis, another witness, swore that Mr. Kelsey had said he did not love Mrs. Kelsey any more because she was fat. He did want the witness to go riding with him, however. She refused to go, she testified, because the man had been drinking. The attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant are expected to make their arguments late this afternoon.

COPIES OF NEW LAW BEING SENT
Graduates of Agricultural Schools and Accredited High Schools May Obtain Teachers' Certificates.
Copies of Senate Bill No. 364, which authorizes the state superintendent of public instruction to issue teachers' certificates to graduates of agricultural schools and high schools under certain conditions, is being mailed from the office of R. H. Wilson, superintendent of the department of education, to the city superintendents throughout the state.

While the bill does not become effective until June 21 it is with the intention of giving the school authorities a chance to become familiar with the law and its requirements that it is being sent out.

Section 1 provides that the state superintendent of public instruction may issue teachers' certificates, valid for two years, to all students who graduate from district agricultural schools or from fully accredited high schools when such schools have satisfied the said state superintendent that the course of study completed by the students desiring such certificates is equivalent to a four year high school fully accredited with the state university and that the said schools have sufficient equipment for teaching agriculture, domestic science and manual training and that the students have completed such a course of psychology and the science of teaching as the said state superintendent may prescribe. Certificates so issued shall license the holder to teach in any of the common schools in Oklahoma for a period of two years.

OLDFIELD'S RACING CAR ARRIVED THIS MORNING

Two Maxwell racers, the winning and second cars in the Grand Prix at Venice, Cal., said to be two of the best racers on the track, today were unloaded and taken to the H. M. Sharp Motor Car company work shop, where they have been cleaned by crowds of the curious all day. They are Maxwell cars numbers 8 and 3, and are driven by Barney Oldfield and Billie Carlson of the Maxwell team.

The four cylinder engine is one of the most powerful in a modern racer. A speed of 115 miles an hour has been made in this car, according to the changes, and considering the newness of the car is in the best shape possible, they say. (Guest said today: "Barney could lose this race. He won from practically the same field entries at the Venice race, and as the course here is better than that one he will win in a walk. We have no fear of engine trouble or trouble without our machine in any part.")

The cars will be on exhibition in the window of the Sharp company as fast as they are gotten into condition. Number 3 is the Oldfield car and the winner of the Venice race and number 8 is the Maxwell that took second money at that event.
